The Stroum Center is located in the heart of the Sonoran Desert in Tucson, Arizona. The Center's facilities include a world-class research library, a museum, and a laboratory. The Center also offers a variety of educational programs, including field schools, workshops, and lectures.

Our Mission

The mission of the Stroum Center is to preserve, protect, and interpret the archaeological heritage of the National Park Service. We do this by conducting research, providing educational programs, and collaborating with other organizations.

Our Research

The Stroum Center conducts research on a wide range of topics related to Native American archaeology. Our research projects include:

- The excavation of prehistoric and historic Native American sites
- The study of Native American material culture
- The analysis of Native American landscapes
- The development of new methods and techniques for archaeological research

Our Educational Programs

The Stroum Center offers a variety of educational programs, including:

- Field schools
- Workshops
- Lectures
- Guided tours

Our educational programs are designed to help people learn about Native American archaeology and the importance of preserving our archaeological heritage.

Our Collaborations

The Stroum Center collaborates with a variety of organizations, including:

- The National Park Service
- The University of Arizona
- The Arizona State Museum
- The Desert Archaeology Center

Our collaborations help us to achieve our mission of preserving, protecting, and interpreting the archaeological heritage of the National Park Service.

Support Our Work

The Stroum Center is a non-profit organization that relies on the support of individuals and organizations. Your support helps us to continue our vital work of preserving, protecting, and interpreting the archaeological heritage of the National Park Service.

There are a number of ways to support our work, including:

- Make a donation
- Become a member
- Attend our events
- Volunteer your time

Your support makes a difference!

Thank you for your interest in the Stroum Center! We hope you will visit our website often to learn more about our work.
