That's exactly what one man did when he decided to leave the hustle and bustle of city life behind and build a tiny home off the grid. He traded in his high-paying job, his big house, and his fancy car for a life of self-reliance and sustainability.

At first, it was tough. He had to learn how to grow his own food, generate his own electricity, and collect his own water. But over time, he began to realize that he was happier than he had ever been before.
