Diana Le is a writer and editor whose work has appeared in The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Guardian, and other publications. She is the author of the memoir Suburban Legend, which was published in 2021. Le was born in Vietnam and immigrated to the United States with her family when she was a child. She grew up in a small town in the Midwest, and her memoir explores the complexities of her identity as a Vietnamese-American woman.

A Haunting Tale of Identity, Family, and the American Dream

In her memoir Suburban Legend, Diana Le writes about her experiences growing up as the daughter of Vietnamese immigrants in a small town in the Midwest. She grapples with her feelings of isolation and otherness, and the ways in which she both conforms to and rebels against the expectations of her family and her community.

Le's writing is honest and unflinching, and she doesn't shy away from difficult topics. She writes about her struggles with mental illness, her experiences with racism and discrimination, and the challenges of navigating two cultures. But she also writes about the love and support of her family, and the ways in which she has found strength and resilience in her identity.

Suburban Legend is a powerful and moving memoir that will resonate with anyone who has ever felt like an outsider. It is a story about the challenges of growing up in a multicultural society, but it is also a story about the power of family, the importance of self-acceptance, and the pursuit of the American dream.
