A Chronicle of Bravery

This captivating volume assembles the firsthand accounts of America's most decorated warriors in Iraq, recipients of the prestigious Medal of Honor. Through their poignant narratives, we witness firsthand the harrowing missions they undertook, the sacrifices they made, and the profound impact these experiences had on their lives.

From intense firefights to heroic rescues, these stories encompass the full spectrum of combat, revealing the complexities of war and the unwavering determination of those who fought on the front lines.

Profiles in Courage

Meet Salvatore Giunta, the first living Marine since the Vietnam War to receive the Medal of Honor for his heroic actions in Afghanistan's Korengal Valley, where he risked his life to save his comrades.

Discover the story of Dakota Meyer, whose bravery in Iraq earned him the Medal of Honor for rescuing 13 fellow Marines and 35 Iraqi soldiers while under heavy fire.

Witness the extraordinary courage of Ryan Pitts, who, despite being severely wounded in a suicide bombing, continued to fight, saving the lives of his fellow soldiers.

Beyond the Battlefield

The impact of war extends far beyond the battlefields. This book explores the personal journeys of these decorated warriors as they return home, grapple with the memories of combat, and navigate the challenges of readjusting to civilian life.

Through their reflections, we gain a deeper understanding of the invisible wounds that often accompany military service and the resilience that allows these individuals to overcome adversity and find purpose in their lives.
