Dr. B.R. Ambedkar was one of the most important figures in Indian history. He was a Dalit leader, social reformer, and the architect of the Indian Constitution. His book, Waiting For Visa, is a firsthand account of his experiences in the United States in the 1930s. The book offers a unique perspective on American race relations and the Indian independence movement.

Ambedkar's Experiences in the United States

Ambedkar arrived in the United States in 1931 to study at Columbia University. He was immediately struck by the racism that he encountered. He was denied entry to restaurants and hotels, and he was often subjected to verbal abuse. Despite these experiences, Ambedkar remained determined to complete his studies. He graduated from Columbia in 1933 and then went on to study at the London School of Economics.

While in the United States, Ambedkar also became involved in the Indian independence movement. He met with other Indian nationalists and helped to organize protests against British rule. Ambedkar's experiences in the United States had a profound impact on his political views. He came to believe that the only way to achieve true equality for Dalits was to fight for Indian independence.
